

Unforgettable Five

Kick off your summer with a stop at one of these ATL classics.

—SARAH GLEIM

Unplugged in the Park is like a rite of summer, and this year's music lineup is even better than last. We're big fans of this free concert series every Sunday night at Park Tavern, and, with performers like Griffin House and Matthew Perryman Jones having already graced the stage last month, you simply can't afford to miss any more of these shows. The good news is there's still a ton of stellar performances to come, including Angie Aparo, Bess Rogers, Rachel Platten, The David Mayfield Parade, Rayland Baxter and The Apache Relay this month alone. The shows start at 7PM and run through Sunday, Oct. 9. Guests must be 21. 500 10th St., 404.249.0001, 99x.com

Jackson Fine Art has been a staple on Atlanta's art scene for more than 20 years—and is the city's go-to gallery for 20th century and contemporary photography. Owner Anna Walker Skillman has worked with and represented cutting-edge photogs like Henri Cartier-Bresson, Elliott Erwitt, David Hilliard, Todd Selby and Angela West for years. And, in 2003, Jackson also became the director of The Sir Elton John Collection. We're thrilled about the gallery's upcoming shows, which open June 24 and feature the works of Joseph Szabo and Andrew Bush. 3115 E. Shadowlawn Ave., 404.233.3739, jacksonfineart.com

